

Casey Granofsky, flute and piccolo

Casey Granofsky is an in-demand flutist in Toronto and Southern Ontario. Engagements in 2021 include workshopping duets with her long-time collaborator, oboist David Vanbiesbrouck, for the East Chamber Music Festival. Previous engagements include the Montreal Symphony, the Kitchener-Waterloo Symphony, the Toronto Concert Orchestra, and the Guelph Symphony.

As a chamber musician, Casey has had the opportunity to perform works ranging from Bach and Telemann to world premiers. In recent years she has had the privilege of performing concerts at the Banff Centre, the Toronto Reference Library, the summer concert series at Mount Pleasant Cemetery in Toronto, the Fresh, Inc. festival, and the Ottawa New Music Creators. While she is well acquainted with the major works involving her instrument, she revels in works for less conventional instrumentation, such as trios for flute, viola, and bass or piccolo, tuba, and piano.

Casey operates an active teaching studio both online and in-person at her home base in Niagara Falls. She has students of all ages and abilities from all over Canada. Some of the proudest moments of her career are seeing her students achieve their musical goals, whether that involves a successful performance, joining a community band, or being accepted to the music program at the university of their dreams.

In 2015 she completed her Master's degree at McGill University, where she studied with Montreal Symphony's principal flute, Timothy Hutchins. Prior to attending McGill, Casey attended the University of Montreal, studying with Denis Bluteau, and completed both a Bachelor's degree and Artist Diploma at The Glenn Gould School where she studied with Dr. Kathleen Rudolph.

In addition to all of the incredible teachers and colleagues she's met during her studies and travels, none of it would have happened had she not caught the "bug" at a young age. She would be remiss to leave out her first flute teacher, Loyda Lastra, who created the musical foundation that Casey continues to build upon to this day.

www.caseygranofsky.com

Instagram: @casey.flute

Facebook: @caseygranofskyflute

(December 2020)